Scoliosis Frequently Asked Questions

Does my child have scoliosis?
It is uncertain at this time if your child has scoliosis because your child has been referred out for further testing. Early detection is important in recognizing and an integral part of your child's health.

What is Scoliosis?
Scoliosis is a musculoskeletal disorder in which there is a sideways curvature of the spine, or backbone. The bones that make up the spine are called vertebrae. Some people who have scoliosis require treatment. Other people, who have milder curves, may only need to visit their doctor for periodic observation.

What does Scoliosis?
People of all ages can have scoliosis. Of every 1,000 children, 3 to 5 develop spinal curves that are considered large enough to need treatment. Adolescent idiopathic scoliosis (scoliosis without known cause) is the most common type and occurs after the age of 10. Girls are more likely than boys to have this type of scoliosis. Spinal scoliosis can run in families, a child who has a parent, brother, or sister with idiopathic scoliosis should be checked regularly for scoliosis by the family physician.

What Causes Scoliosis?
In 50 to 85 percent of people, the cause of scoliosis is unknown; this is called idiopathic scoliosis. Before concluding that a person has idiopathic scoliosis, the doctor looks for other possible causes, such as injury or infection. Causes of curves are classified as either neuromuscular or structural.

How Does the Doctor Diagnose Scoliosis?
The doctor takes the following steps to evaluate a patient for scoliosis such as medical history, physical examination, x-ray evaluation, curve measurement, location and posture of curves.

Curve Patterns

Does Scoliosis Have To Be Treated? What Are the Treatments?
Many children who are seen by the doctor by a school scoliosis screening program have very mild spinal curves that do not need treatment. When a child does need treatment, the doctor may send him or her to an orthopedic spine specialist. The doctor will suggest the best treatment for each patient based on the patient's age, how much curve he or she is likely to grow, the degree and pattern of the curve, and the type of scoliosis.

Lice Frequently Asked Questions

Why was my child sent home from school like No-Nix pediculicide?
This medicine prevents nits from hatching and kills the lice. School nurses are generally working for the most complete cure possible. Your child's lice may be resistant to the medicine and require a different active from trioxalolone.

What are head lice, and how do they differ from other lice?
Head lice are small parasitic insects occasionally attached to the scalp and back of the head. They are not dangerous to the child. They are not a sign of poor hygiene. They are not a sign of lice infestation. They are not a sign of lice infestation. They are not a sign of lice infestation.

How do lice infestation occur?
Head lice do not enter by blood feeding, nor do they enter by crawling on the scalp. They enter by crawling on the scalp. They enter by crawling on the scalp. They enter by crawling on the scalp.

What should I do if I see a lice infestation?
If you suspect a lice infestation, you should check your child's hair. If you find lice, you should use a lice treatment. You should use a lice treatment. You should use a lice treatment.

What should be done?
Washing and drying with heat the pillowcases, sheets, nightgowns, towels and stuffed animals may possibly eliminate the lice and eggs that might otherwise remain in a family member. Combs, brushes, hair clips, hairpins, hair ties, and hair accessories should be washed in hot water (120°F) to kill the lice and eggs. Items that are not washable should be sealed in a plastic bag for 14 days.

Can anything be used to repel lice?
The application of an abundance of hair oil can be an effective repellent. Lice is not attracted and may neither be able nor effective. Head lice do not seem to be readily repelled naturally, and they may live for up to 48 hours without a host.

Head lice often travel.
Head lice rarely travel more than 16 inches, and they are not known to transmit infections, except from person to person. Thus, they should not be considered a vector for a public health problem.
